The screenshot shows a web interface for managing products. At the top, there's a breadcrumb 'Catalog > Products' and a large 'Products' header. Below this is a filter bar with 'Filter by categories (Accessories)' and a 'Bulk actions' dropdown. A dropdown menu is open for 'Filter by categories (Accessories)', showing a tree structure: 'Home' (selected), 'Vêtements', 'Accessories', and 'Art'. To the right of the dropdown are 'Expand', 'Collapse', and 'Unselect' options. Below the filter bar is a table with columns 'Reference' and 'Category'. The table contains three rows of product data. Each row has a checkbox on the left, a product image, a product name, and a reference number. The first two rows are mugs, and the third is a cushion. The category for all three is 'Accessoires de maison'.
